Is San Francisco State open?

Yes. San Francisco State remains open; however, efforts to mitigate the spread of COVID-19 have been put in place, including reducing the population on our campuses by limiting on-campus operations to necessary offices and moving the majority of staff and faculty to work using remote modalities.

For the most up-to-date information on operating hours and to see which offices will remain physically open, visit the webpages for each respective office or find links at the University’s COVID-19 website, under the Offices Open on Campus section. When in doubt, call the office to confirm operating hours.

Are there employees that are required to stay home?

Yes. Employees who are 65 and older or vulnerable to #COVID-19 must practice home isolation. Effective immediately, all CSU employees so categorized must stay off-campus.

If employees in one of the categories above are unable to telecommute, will they continue to be paid?

Yes. Employees should contact Human Resources. They will be placed on administrative leave with pay at their current rate and for their normal scheduled work hours.

Should managers and staff come to work during this time of COVID-19 pandemic?

Please contact your direct supervisor. Appropriate on-campus employee levels are necessary to maintain campus operations. However, in efforts to mitigate the spread of COVID-19, campus leadership has asked staff and managers to use alternative work arrangements, where possible.

Managers and staff members have different jobs and responsibilities and the modifications that can be made to their work will vary based on those differences. For managers who may need to shift work responsibilities for staff members, please contact Human Resources for further guidance.

What if a manager or staff member is sick?
Managers and staff who are sick should stay home. If a manager or staff member is sick and staying home, they should follow normal protocols for contacting their direct supervisor and using leave time.

Those over 60 and those with health conditions that might increase the risk of contracting COVID-19 are encouraged to contact their health care providers for recommendations and then contact their direct supervisor and Human Resources.

What if a manager or staff member believes they have been directly exposed to COVID-19?

If you have been in close contact with an individual who has a confirmed COVID-19 diagnosis, San Francisco State urges you to stay home even if you do not have symptoms. Please contact your direct supervisor to address your concerns.

If you have had close contact with a confirmed COVID-19 patient, or your symptoms seem serious or are of concern to you, email or call your health care provider for advice. Do not go into a health facility without first contacting it for advice. For a description of symptoms, please visit https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/about/symptoms.html.

Those over 60 and those with health conditions that might increase the risk of contracting COVID-19 are encouraged to contact their health care providers for recommendations.

Can a campus require employees diagnosed with COVID-19 to disclose their test results?

a. Yes. The Americans with Disabilities Act (“ADA”) permits an employer to require that an employee disclose health information with respect to whether the employee poses a direct threat to the health or safety of themselves or others. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission states that there are four factors to consider in determining whether there is a direct threat: (i) the duration of the risk, (ii) the nature and severity of the potential harm, (iii) the likelihood that the potential harm will occur, and (iv) the imminence of the potential harm.

b. This information is considered confidential, and it is the campus’ obligation to take reasonable steps to protect the confidentiality of the positive test result by (i) not identifying the employee by name, and (ii) avoiding, to the extent reasonably feasible, making other references that would permit a manager or co-workers to guess that an employee has been infected. While a campus cannot prevent speculation in the workplace, it must take reasonable steps not to contribute to it. It is a campus’ responsibility to inform co-workers who may have had contact with the employee that they may have been exposed and who may wish to see a health care provider to monitor their health.

c. It is permissible under the ADA to allow an employee to voluntarily disclose their diagnosis. However, disclosure to the Department of Health in the state/city where the employer is located or the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (“CDC”) may be mandatory. In this instance, the Department of Health or CDC would make contact with any individuals who may have been exposed. If the employee refuses to allow a voluntary disclosure, the campus must maintain the confidentiality of the individual and their health information with respect to colleagues.

Where can employees get information to help cope with non-work-related effects of COVID-19?

a. Employees may use their Campus employee assistance program. If your campus uses Life Matters by Empathia, employees may call Life Matters at (800) 367-7474 for direct assistance (free and confidential); employees will be asked to identify their campus.

Employees may also log on to www.mylifematters.com, and will be required to provide an access code. Your campus benefits office should have this information available.

b. Empathia has also provided helpful resources to help employees cope with the effects of COVID-19. These resources can be found on the www.mylifematters.com website as well as the following link (https://www.empathia.com/promos/COVID19_Pacific.php).

How should managers and staff practice social distancing at work?

Increasing the space between people and decreasing the frequency of contact among them is known as social distancing. There are several ways that managers and staff members can practice social distancing at work including:

- Canceling or rescheduling nonessential meetings
• Using technology such as Zoom teleconferencing and other mediums of virtual communication to hold meetings

• Sitting at a distance from others in a cubicle-style or open work environment

Will managers and staff lose pay if they need to be out of the office due to reasons related to COVID-19?

No. San Francisco State will continue to pay managers and staff who must be out of the office related to COVID-19. San Francisco State will ensure that sick time and other paid leave benefits, including vacation, CTO, and Personal Holiday are applied so that managers and staff will not lose pay or applicable benefits. Human Resources will work with managers and staff who have exhausted their leave balances.

If the need arises, what are alternative work arrangements for managers to consider?

• Staggering shifts and allowing flexible schedules (work on-site coupled with remote work assignments for the time not spent on-site);

• Allowing temporary telecommuting for those staff who need to work from home.

Examples of situations when staff may need to telecommute include:

• taking care of self and family members who are ill;
• school closures;
• members of vulnerable populations.

In situations where work needs to temporarily be performed remotely, managers and their staff members should work together to develop a remote work plan to complete their day-to-day work assignments, special assignments, projects, job-related reading or training if staff cannot report to their normal work locations. In developing a remote work plan, managers should review with the staff what is needed to perform work remotely.

Managers are asked to consult with Human Resources to ensure that these arrangements are documented and do not place an undue burden on staff who are required to remain on campus.
Where can managers and staff find the temporary telecommuting agreement to discuss with their supervisor?

The Temporary Telecommuting Agreement form can be accessed below. These will be forwarded to Human Resources for review.

Temporary Telecommute Form – Docusign

Temporary Telecommute Form – PDF

When allowing employees to telecommute, keep in mind the safeguarding of confidential data.

Use of sick leave and paid leave benefits

For specific guidance on the use of sick leave and paid leave benefits as well as the Family Medical Leave Act during extended periods of absence, please contact Human Resources.

Campus Parking Options

Faculty and staff can purchase daily or weekly permits online at a reduced rate. The cost will be based on the employee’s bargaining unit’s permit rates instead of the $8/day rate. For assistance, please contact parking@sfsu.edu or call (415) 338-1441.

Can I make updates to my Commuter Check benefits?

In light of the issued shelter-in-place orders to mitigate the spread of COVID-19 and as many of you are changing your commute to campus, we would like to let you know that you can adjust your commuter check deduction or temporarily opt-out of specific months through the Commuter Check website (https://login.commuterbenefits.com/). This will ensure you do not accumulate excess funds on your Clipper Card or Commuter Check MasterCard.

What are SF State's sanitation efforts?

The University has been frequently sanitizing all public spaces and high touch areas including classrooms, bathrooms, entryways and dining commons with cleaning products designed to kill viruses (including COVID 19).
